

I believe that aircraft cabins are too confined an area to allow cellphone use. It will be disruptive and the passengers near the talker will not be able to move. another problem is the ambient noise which is so high that cellphone users will need to talk very loudly to be heard, thus enhancing the disruption. I might favor enabling text messages but not voice transmissions.